Fowls Are Fully Feathered-Water is Essential.

Goslings do not need feed until they | are 36 hours old or more, when they should be given stale bread scaked in milk or water, to which finely chopped bolled eggs may be added. Feed three or four times daily for the first two or three weeks, with chopped grass or some other green feed added, this latter to be increased in quantity from the first. Plenty of fresh, clean water should be supplied, and five per cent of fine grit or sharp sand may be added to the feed or kept in a hopper before the goslings.

After two or three weeks, if the goslings have a good grass range, they need only one light feed daily of a mash made up of two parts shorts and one part of cornneal or ground oats or ground barley. After they are six weeks old, if they still need extra feed, change the mash to equal parts shorts, cornmeal and ground oats, with five per cent meat scrap. Where the pasture is good, many goslings are raised from the time they are two or three weeks old to fattening time without any grain feed, but the addition of a mash as described above is an advantage at all times. Whole grains are not usually fed until the goslings are well feathered.
